Description

The 1996 Larson 260 Cabrio is a popular mid-cabin cruiser that offers a practical blend of comfort, performance and sociable space for relaxed days on the water or easy overnight escapes. At around 26 feet, it is large enough to feel reassuringly substantial yet still manageable for owners stepping up from a smaller boat, with a cockpit layout well suited to entertaining, a roomy cabin for its size, and the versatility to handle coastal cruising, river trips or weekends at the marina. Typical features may include a convertible dinette, compact galley, enclosed head compartment and sleeping accommodation for family or friends, making it a smart choice for boaters who want more than a day boat without moving into a much larger vessel. Many examples of the Larson 260 Cabrio from this era are valued for their approachable handling and solid family-cruiser character, though, as with any pre-owned boat, condition, engine history, maintenance records and recent upgrades are key considerations. For buyers seeking a classic sports cruiser with comfortable weekender credentials, the 1996 Larson 260 Cabrio remains a charming and capable option with plenty of life left for new adventures.
